Golfing at the Meadow Brook course on Brook street was largely abandoned yesterday for aquatic sports and because of this natural preference for the water, Harry Livendale, one of the younger members of the club, had a narrow escape from a serious accident. In a sequestered pool near the links, the club members have made a bathing place and it was while several young men were in the water that Livendale, struck the gravel bottom of the stream. He did not dive straight into the pool, else the results would have been more dangerous. As it transpired, he escaped with a bad scalp wound, sustained when his head struck a sharp stone on the bed of the brook. The dive stunned him somewhat, but after dressing the wound he was able to walk home.

Yesterday was not observed as go-to-church Sunday in Barre. On the contrary it was a churchless Sabbath, the first in several years and even people who are wont to think twice before attending divine worship somehow felt void. In none of the Protestant churches was there any semblance of a service, although at St. Monica's church the parish priest, Rev. P. M. McKenna, celebrated the mass. Worshipers were not present, however, and so far as the public was concerned a church that weekly opens its doors to the thousands was closed. The hallelujah ministrations of the Salvation Army were conspicuously absent, and "unwashed legions" were deprived of their street services. The same order that closed all churches effected an inhibition on the Sunday afternoon patriotic meeting in City square, in consequence of which former Congressman Frank Plumley of Northfield, who was scheduled to speak, did not appear.

The Oldsmobile Six

THE justification of the Oldsmobile Model 37, six-cylinder motor car, is found in the growing interest of the public in a light six-cylinder car possessing the refinements and luxurious appointments of higher priced cars. The market seems over-crowded with cheap six-cylinder cars.

The new Oldsmobile Six, without question, satisfies the purchaser who is seeking unusual performance, economy in upkeep and fuel consumption, and withal, the elegance of those details usually associated only with cars of high price.

The smooth-running Oldsmobile motor, with all working parts enclosed, develops 40 h. p. plus. This clean, handsome motor is an inspiration to the owner who likes to exhibit a beautiful power-plant.

Walnut dash with nickel-finished instruments; buttonless upholstery of high-grade, long-grain, bright-finished leather; combination tonneau and step light; side curtains that open with the doors. These appointments and many other refinements stamp this car as representative of the utmost in light car construction.

Two types—a roomy five-passenger touring car, and a two-passenger roadster with convertible rear compartment containing a leather-upholstered seat for two extra passengers.
